DESCRIPTION:
This course will be conducted in Portugal during Wintermester 2018-2019. During this course students will discover Portugal’s revolutionary approach on drug use and trafficking. For 14 days, students will learn about the decriminalization policy that Portugal adopted in 2001, the reasons why such a radical shift happened, the changes implemented within the Portuguese society, and assess the success of this approach. Since drug policy is a complex and interdisciplinary subject, the aim of this course is to give students the opportunity to grasp the many topics connected with it and also to understand the different viewpoints of the key professionals involved (doctors, legislators, counsellors, police officers, etc.).

The course will include lectures and group discussions led by faculty and guest speakers from Portuguese governmental and non-governmental organizations. The course offers rich cultural learning experiences that are derived from touring ancient historic sites, engaging with modern day city learning about harm reduction policies and services, and public and nonprofit organizations. Students will observe the impact of cultural and societal attitudes on the availability of harm reduction services, and the overall process of psychosocial adaptation of individuals with an addiction-based disability. Student learning will be further enriched through participation in service learning projects with local non-governmental groups in various cities. The group will tour the three major Portuguese cities of Lisbon, Sintra and Porto.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:
Objectives of the course are to:

1. Develop an understanding of the broad economic, political, social and cultural dimensions influencing harm reduction policies and services in Portugal and making comparisons with what you know about the same in the U.S.
2. Better understand the addiction experience in a developed nation that has the lowest incomes per head among member states of the European Union and compare it to that of the US, a developed nation with a comparatively higher per capita income.
3. Develop an understanding of the myriad roles played by non-profit organizations in building social capital; private sector organizations and governmental organizations/projects to reduce stigma and increase access pertaining to individuals with addiction-based disabilities.
4. Investigate factors that impact the recovery of populations with special needs such as children, people with disabilities, elderly and women differently especially under the cultural and social norms prevalent in Portugal.

5. Examine the relevance of social, physical, and economic vulnerability indicators and their impacts on community capacity and resilience to addictions in Portugal.

6. Observe citizens’ capacity building and grassroots efforts, interact closely with faculty and peers, and participate actively in service learning projects with governmental and non-governmental organizations.

7. Observe interventions and services developed for individuals with addiction-based disabilities that incorporate consideration of their cultural perspectives as well as recognition of external cultural/diversity barriers.

8. Enhance cultural intelligence quotient among students in order to increase multicultural competencies when providing service to individuals with various kinds of disabilities.

RATIONAL FOR TRAVEL:
Traveling to Portugal will offer students the unique experience of understanding the challenges of providing harm reduction services to individuals with substance use disorders in a European nation firsthand. The interactions with multi-sector groups charged with harm reduction policy development, implementation, preparedness and management in Portugal, cannot be duplicated in a closed classroom setting in the US and are hence extremely valuable. Students will also gain a deeper understanding of the impact of a person’s cultural and societal attitudes on his/her psychosocial adaptation to substance use disorders. Immersion into another culture can help promote mindfulness of the struggles of individuals operating in a non-dominant culture and thus promote students to provide culturally sensitive services to persons with substance use disorders and other disabilities who are members of various cultural diaspora within the US.

COURSE PERFORMANCE AND ASSESSMENTS:

1. Active Participation (Grading 20%)
Our partners from CIEE and your professor have put months into planning and setting up meetings with important subject matter experts and agencies in Portugal. Yet, local government agencies, nonprofit organizations or guest speakers may sometimes be required to change their schedules due to extenuating circumstances, or the traffic congestion and inclement weather. We may then be required to make alternative plans, so be prepared to be flexible. You are expected to attend every session and be punctual throughout this study abroad program. It is critical that you are prompt and prepared for departure so that we can arrive as scheduled for our daily tours/visits. It is important to present yourself (dress and behavior) appropriately at all times. You are representing not only yourself but also your family, your university, and your country.

Missing an activity or being late, being rude to your classmates, driver, guide or faculty member will result in a warning the first time and a letter grade reduction the second time. Please let the faculty leader know directly if you cannot make it to a site visit or lecture due to ill-health. Being engaged means that you have a positive attitude, are actively listening, asking relevant questions, taking notes and giving your undivided attention and respect to the speakers. The tour guide, or one of the faculty members may deliver short lectures during “drive time” on extended day journeys. You are expected to be attentive at those times as well. If you have difficulty understanding someone because of their accent, it is ok to politely request that they repeat themselves.

2. Travel Diary/Journal: (Grading 50%)
You are expected to note down your thoughts for the day in a travel journal. You may begin journaling the minute you step on the plane at DFW International Airport till the moment you return. The purposes of this assignment is firstly to illustrate your knowledge and changing perspectives of the cultures and people of Portugal: differences between people in rural-suburban-urban contexts; differences in cultures across cities – Lisbon-Sintra-Porto; clothing, food, housing, language, colors and living practices and; Secondly to demonstrate your understanding of the challenges of harm reduction practices in Portugal and your understanding of the roles of nonprofit, private and local government organizations in resiliency and capacity building. You will do this successfully by reading all articles listed above and making comparisons between what you know about harm reduction practices in the US and what you read and see in Portugal. In this way you will try to gauge what lessons are transferrable between these two great democracies of the world.

Record your thoughts “as you go” or you may find that you cannot keep all the information as clearly delineated as you would like. It is required that you carry a smaller notebook/journal with you at all times instead of carrying a large journal. Be sure to take a photograph or two at each site visit and cultural visit, but seek permission before doing so. Try to ensure that these photographs are taken in work settings and not staged if possible. Include these photographs when you type up the journal for final submission.

Each day’s journaling should include the following subheadings:

a. Professional appointments/ site visits
Entries should include, but are not limited to names, titles, organizational mission, date, speaker details, a brief narrative relating to your learning experience on capacity building, resilience, harm reduction, highlights about speaker’s breadth of knowledge etc.

b. Service learning projects
Entries should include but not be limited to organizational and project details. Who did you work with? What was your role? What were the challenges? What would you change about the service learning project? What were your impressions of the local volunteers? Did you feel you made a difference in a small way? Why/ why not? If you did not engage in a project on a particular day, brainstorm a harm reduction idea/service/tool/technique currently used in the US. Discuss whether the idea could also be implemented in provision of services in Portugal (keep in mind cultural, societal, economic, infrastructure differences between the two nations).

c. Cultural experiences in Portugal
Give a brief description including the date, where, what you saw at various venues, on the bus or metro rides, walking on the streets, bargaining for gifts, buying tea at a local stall etc. Differentiate between cultural activities in the different cities. Take every opportunity to engage people in conversations, have your photograph taken with the local people. Include photographs that exemplify the culture: food, colors, ancient monuments, farmlands, and the overall rhythm of the nation. Enter your favorite photograph and a caption in the Study Abroad Photography Contest and make us proud by being a winner!

3. Discussion Leader (Grading 10%)
Every evening, one of you will serve as a discussion leader. As a discussion leader you will begin by reading your journal entry for the day followed by your take home message from the day’s experiences. Be sure to share the primary emotion that you came away with that day, be it empathy, joy, sorrow, pleasure, anger, surprise etc. and explaining why that was so. Be sure to read the suggested articles so that you can formulate questions and arguments, backed up by research and your personal observations. Ask your classmates questions, draw out comparisons between what is known about these issues in the US and what you saw in Portugal, what changes could be made, what lessons can be learned on either side, what policies are transferrable and what are not, what are the challenges etc.

For GRADUATE STUDENTS: This assignment will include an additional component. You will research the agency/site assigned to you and present answers to the following questions prior to our group visit to the agency:

1. Agency’s establishment
   a. How long, by whom, locations?
2. Mission/Vision
3. Types of clients helped
4. Funding sources (if any)
5. Service Projects/Programs
6. Comparable agencies/services in the US, Texas, and DFW area
7. Interesting tidbits of information
8. Other relevant information that you think would be vital to know before visiting the site.
9. Questions you want to ask the agency representative during the visit.

4. Professional Development (Grading 20%)
Submit a typed reflection essay of 4-5 pages (12” Times New Roman font, 1” margin all around) about this study abroad experience in Portugal and describe how you have grown personally and professionally. Begin by elaborating on what you knew about Portugal? What expectations you came with? Were these expectations met? What was unexpected and unbearable? What was exciting, joyful and empowering? Identify your most valuable learning experiences and memories, underscoring what you will share with your family and friends. With your permission I would like to post this on our Facebook page and the departmental website. Turn this reflection essay along with the journal as one PDF.
